Test on Unicode (UTF-8)

The Unicode-encoded data file below was created from the electronic version of DeFrancis' ABC Dictionary in Wenlin 2.x. Only one font is used for this webpage, including intermix of traditional and simplified characters, as well as Pinyin with tone diacritics (including the caron (hachek) for Tone 3 over vowels). The SimSun font provides a better display (and printing) of roman letters than does MS Song, for example, for this same page, while Bitstream's Cyberbit misses quite a few of the Chinese characters, in addition to displaying (and printing) vowels containing the hachek for Tone 3 differently from vowels with one of the other tone diacritic marks. (Test on your own other Chinese Unicode fonts and external decoders. Or test with lists containing more obscure Chinese characters.)

This webpage is best viewed with font preference for Netscape 4.x set as follows:

EDIT > PREFERENCES > FONTS > ENCODING. For the Encoding: Unicode.

Choose for Variable Width Font: SimSun.

Choose for Fixed Width Font: SimSun.

If needed, also select the following from the menubar:

VIEW > CHARACTER SET > UNICODE (UTF-8)

(Adjust as needed for viewing with MS Internet Explorer.)
